34 (without 34/8 blank). Modern pencilled foliation 1-261. On thick vellum with clearly distinguishable hair and flesh sides, arranged according to Gregory. Double column, 22 lines. Ruled in blind with a sharp hard point, bifolium by bifolium on the hair side: 23 horizontal lines for the Biblical text; three vertical lines each in the inner margins, between columns, and in the outer margins (the last cropped); three narrower horizontal lines in upper margins and four in lower margins for the Masorah magna, which was not copied; written area of Biblical text: 215 x 155 mm. Prickings visible in top margins (elsewhere cropped). The blind ruling occasionally supplemented with colored plummet on the flesh side (ff. 79v, 99v, 104r, 216r, 227v). Written by a single skilled, professional scribe in dark brown ink in a square Ashkenazic (Franco-German) script, with vocalization and accent signs. Marginal corrections and annotations by the original scribe and others (occasionally cropped). Justification of line-ends accomplished by stretching or compressing the last letters, by anticipating the next word (in many cases the last letter of the beginning of the following word is executed in a stunted masoretic details unknown from any other source. A description of these features is available on request.

Christie's thanks Dr. Malachi Beit-Arié, Dr. Colette Sirat, and Dr. Shelomo Zucker for their contributions to the cataloguing of this lot.
